Project Title	Photocatalytic and photoelectrocatalytic coatings with a gradient composition
Project description	This project aims to develop photoactive coatings with a gradient composition that would enhance the separation of photo-induced charges. Photoelectrodes with such a structure should provide better performance in electrochemical processes (anodic or cathodic), such as water oxidation, water reduction, or carbon dioxide reduction. Porous photocatalytic coatings characterized by a variable composition across their cross-section should enable improved separation of oxidation and reduction processes, thereby enhancing the overall efficiency of the photocatalytic reaction.
